

MOKENA BOY KILLED ON WOLF RD.

Failure To Stop Puts 6 In Hospital

The same old story, failure to obey a stop sign was the cause of a serious auto and truck crash at the death corner at 159th and Oak Park ave., north of Tinley Park late Wednesday afternoon.

A transport truck and a green Pontiac Sedan were approaching the intersection going south when the transport truck slowed down and turned east on 159th street, but the Pontiac kept on going south and when in the intersection was hit broadside by the Tietmeyer Dairy Co., truck of Homewood which was traveling east on 159th street and had the right of way. The impact hurled the sedan between the gas pumps and the filling station building of John Fahrenholz at the corner of the intersection and the sedan hit Mr. Fahrenholz's car parked alongside of the building.

The truck turned over twice. In the cab were Bert Adams and Joseph Padden, both of Joliet, employees of the Tietmeyer Dairy. They were pinned in and some by standers in the crowd which rapidly collected extricated them and took them to the Oak Forest hospital. They were cut, buried and badly shaken up.

In the Pontiac sedan was a colored family from Logansport, Indiana. They gave their names Manly Newson, 62, his wife Elizabeth, 59, George Bacon, 9. They were quite badly cut and otherwise injured. A state highway police officer took them to the Oak Forest hospital.

Truck and auto were almost reduced to junk and were towed to the Koehler Bros., garage in Goeleville. Broken bottles and glass littered the pavement for hundreds of feet and was quickly gathered up to prevent cut tires.

Predicts Big Willkie Landslide

Emil Hurja, executive director of the Democratic national committee from 1932 to 1936, predicted last Wednesday that Wendell L. Willkie will be elected President by a plurality of from one and a half to three million votes.

Hurja, now publisher of The Pathfinder magazine, has considerable reputation as an analyst of political trends. As James A. Farley's assistant he predicted accurately the outcome of the 1932, 1934 and 1936 elections. He now takes what he calls an idealized cross section poll.

His prediction, made before the newly organized Citizens Information committee in the Palmer House in Chicago, was based on a nation wide poll taken 10 days ago. It revealed, he said, a growing defection to Willkie among the 1936 Roosevelt voters in urban areas.

"So great is this defection," he said, "that if it continues, the present campaign may take on the proportions of a landslide."

Hurja finds from 11 to 14 per cent of the voters now are in what he calls "don't know" class. The majority of these did not vote in 1936, and have not decided what to do in 1940. To these he posed the question, "Are you opposed to the President holding three four-year terms?"

"Sixty-seven percent are opposed to the third term," he said. "This may well decide the election."

His poll of persons on relief shows a 12.2 decrease in Roosevelt strength. "But that still leaves them a Democratic majority," he added. The next economic level, composed of persons who earn less than $1,200 a year, shows a falling off of 22.9 in Roosevelt strength since 1936.

"Every indication points to a victory for Willkie," he said.

"My most recent poll shows 52.9 per cent for Roosevelt, a 2,700,000 majority, but of that 2,900,000 is a majority in the southern states, which Willkie cannot expect to carry."

"Even with a 52.9 per cent national poll, it portends a Willkie victory."

"My own feeling," he concluded "is that Willkie will win by one and a half to three million votes, but my hunch is that he'll win from 5 to 8 million."

Preceding Hurja's address, the one thousand business men at the luncheon subscribed $48,488 to help return Illinois to its traditional Republicanism.

Motor Scooter, First Used as 'Adult's Toy,' Now Plays Important Transportation Role

By NATHANIEL WAYNE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—A young man motored into New York one day not so long ago. He had started from Los Angeles for Chicago and when he arrived there decided since he was averaging 117 miles to the gallon, he had enough money left to go on to New York. When he arrived in New York, the trip had cost him $8 for fuel.

Naturally the lad wasn't driving a ten-ton truck, not even an ordinary passenger automobile. He was riding in a motor scooter, a vehicle that started out several years ago as a toy at an amusement park and has ended up as a machine that has the transportation industry agog.

Even the builders thought of them in the beginning as a frivolous adult plaything. The idea then was to install them in amusement parks. That was back in 1936. Much to the manufacturers' own amazement they soon discovered the scooters being used by Hollywood actors and actresses for recreation inside the studios during rest periods. And more or less youthful vacationers started riding them for sport in Florida winter resorts.

It wasn't necessary for this to go on for long without attracting attention. A few enterprising men soon established scooter stations and rented by the hour the power-driven, magnified children's toy. The proprietor of the establishment at Jacksonville Beach, Fla., stocked 50 for use on the 37-mile stretch of smooth, firm beach that appears there at low tide.

Original Model Redesigned.

However, it was not until the manufacturers redesigned the scooter and gave it more power and mechanical durability, that Business began to give it attention. While this has been less than three years ago, already more than 50,000 are in operation.

Telegraph companies have found that messengers can deliver twice as many telegrams, with greater speed by use of the scooters instead of a bicycle. Retailers have discovered that it offers a swift and cheap means for light deliveries. Garages are buying them to speed up deliveries of cars to owners who ask that their automobiles be sent to their homes. (The scooter is hooked on the rear bumper as a trailer.) Airfields are stocking them to eliminate the long walks between runways and hangars.

What is making the automobile industry think twice, however, is increased use of the motored gliders for non-commercial purposes. Some notable cases of long-distance touring are being recorded. A 55-year-old Missouri man in 18 months traveled 28,000 miles in 37 states, Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Mexico, Cuba and the Bahamas. He towed a trailer containing a folding cot, blankets, clothing and a radio. He averaged more than 100 miles per gallon and his expenses were $1 a day.

Low Cost Operation.

Two boys of 15 and 18 made a six-week journey last year from Minneapolis to Monterey, Mexico, and returned, carrying bedding, tent, clothing and some tools. The total cost of the 4,600-mile trip was $88.51. They used less than 40 gallons of gasoline.

Retail sales agents of automobiles are asking, "how long has this been going on?" They also would like to know where it is going to take them. As yet, none of the larger manufacturers of automobiles are turning out motor scooters. That may be changed any day now.

Meanwhile there are about 10 specialist companies making scooters, and they are laying down a nationwide sale organization this year. The improvement and business application begun in 1938, increased in 1939 and is being vastly accelerated since spring. New models have gone in for streamlining and even more horsepower.

Telegraph companies are reported to be motorizing their messenger service, at least on the Pacific coast, and are expected to be using 4,000 scooters by the end of this year. The new type of machines are also doing service for parcel delivery companies, druggists, grocers, butchers, confectioners, automobile dealers, garages, printers, army and navy, police departments, postmen, and many others. In large industrial plants they transport tools, supplies and men, passing through gates and doors too narrow for motor trucks, and also do pickup work outside of the plants.

Export Sales Also.

Although no drive for export sales has been made scooters have been shipped to countries all around the world—from Alaska to Argentina and from northern Europe to South Africa, and to Hawaii, the Philippines, China, New Guinea, Australia, India, and Palestine.

Light pleasure and messenger models have a top speed of 35 miles per hour and travel 100 to 125 miles on one gallon of gasoline. The heavier parcel carriers can make 25 or more miles per hour and run 75 miles on a gallon. The weight is close to the pavement, the doughnut tires give non-skid traction and all have brakes for safe operation. The numerous models are suited to many uses, for convenient transportation over short distances or on tours of thousands of miles and for the carriage of loads up to 200 pounds. Lastly, they are priced from less than $100 to $275.

Power of the engines has been tripled in many models and now ranges from 1/4 to 2 1/2 horsepower. All the engines are of single-cylinder, air-cooled, four-cycle type and operate at high speed, delivering maximum power and torque within a range of 2,000 to 3,500 revolutions per minute. They are self-contained little power plants, complete with accessories and fuel tank, and are manufactured by four small-engine companies primarily for stationary power purposes and for driving lawn mowers, small agricultural implements and the like.

Engine Equipment.

The engines are equipped with air cleaner, generator, starter, speed governor, flywheel air blower, fuel tank, and lighting coil to supply electric current for horn and lamps. Some models have driving-belt pulleys that give automatic change of speed through all ratios from low to high speed. One has a two-speed sliding gear transmission, and some have an automatic clutch that releases tension on the belt so the engine can idle when the scooter is standing still.

Arrangements for carrying two persons take the form of an extra seat on the scooter for tandem and of a passenger sidecar designed to harmonize with the scooter.

Engines are concealed in a ventilated sheet-steel hood mounted in front of and over the rear wheel on a unit drop frame made of pressed steel, channel steel, or steel tubing and having a broad, flat foot-board. A wide, flat, comfortable coil-spring seat cushion is supported on the hood or on long springs extending up over it. A kick starter is provided on the side or front of the hood, and either a contracting or expanding brake on the rear wheel is operated by a pedal on the toe-board or by a lever or grip on the handlebar.

Enthusiastic voters strongly influence public opinion polls . . . 'Undecided' answers may indicate big silent vote.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Is there going to be a big silent vote this year? That question is often propounded in political campaigns, but this year it seems to be of more than normal interest.

For instance, the very large percentage of persons in every one of the polls who refuse to tell how they are going to vote, or say they have not made up their minds. Then there is the curious fact that more women than men are registered in a surprising number of communities, including some big cities.

Now it stands to reason that no such percentage of people who are classified in the various polls as "undecided" are really undecided. It is not that they have not made up their minds—a very large percentage of them. It is that they are not willing to SAY how they are going to vote.

There are two curiously conflicting elements in any poll that has EVER been taken. They were true of the old New York Herald poll, which was the "Bible" on political trends until it went so sour in 1916 and was discontinued. They were true of the Literary Digest poll, which was the last word until it "blew up" in 1936. They are true of the present polls, and will be true of any future polls that may ever be taken.

TREND IS IMPORTANT

One of these is that anyone enthusiastic for his or her candidate wants to make the best showing possible. A number of these people know that the important thing about any poll is usually the CHANGE from the last election.

For instance, if a person polled this year says he is going to vote for Roosevelt, the really important thing about this is whether he voted for Roosevelt or Landon four years ago. This percentage of gains and losses, carefully tabulated, is what has made a number of local polls so accurate in indicating the trend over a long period of years.

So if a man is enthusiastic enough about Roosevelt, he may tell whoever is taking the poll that he voted for Landon four years ago, thus making his vote in the poll count for a lot more as showing Roosevelt strength than if he admitted that he voted for Roosevelt four years ago.

Similarly a man who actually voted for Landon four years ago, and is going to vote for Willkie this year, may tell the person polling him that he voted for Roosevelt four years ago. By so doing he helps indicate a Willkie trend.

POLLS LESS RELIABLE

This has become so well known that actually the efficiency of the poll in indicating a trend is NOT NEARLY SO GOOD as it was some years back, say prior to 1920.

But when a man or woman REFUSES to say how he or she is going to vote, that is a horse of another color!

This tends somewhat to offset the other factor of inaccuracy in indicating a trend. There are various motives for a person refusing to tell, but the net result of it all is to impair the accuracy of the poll.

Some of the slight Republican hope in 1936 was based on this factor. The G. O. P. leaders thought that a great many persons were going to vote for Landon, but were AFRAID to say so lest they be taken off the WPA or relief rolls.

There are some who have the same feeling today. Their theory is that while this did not prove to be true four years ago, the passage of so much time without real recovery, and without the opening up of real jobs, has convinced this unfortunate class that the New Deal will never be able to give them the opportunity they want.

Of course there is no possible way of any poll checking on the accuracy or inaccuracy of this contention.

But it remains astonishing the very large number of persons who refuse to say how they are going to vote.

PREPARE FOR DEFENSE

Preparedness for national defense appears to be progressing at an increasing rate. Contracts for almost 20,000 planes and engines have been placed by the army and navy since July 1. Army orders total $1,003,887,000 and navy orders $223,353,000. These orders were placed in furtherance of the army's plan to build up a force of 25,000 planes by 1942.

With an eye to recent developments in the European war, the first U. S. battalion of 500 parachute troops will be created soon at Fort Benning, Ga., according to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

Administration leaders in Congress are believed to be considering huge loans to South American countries to help them build up their military forces. Although no formal requests for credit have been made, several Latin-American countries are definitely interested in obtaining modern war equipment from the United States.

Irritability Often Due to Need of Food

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ONE of the bits of knowledge wives and mothers have learned by experience is that if any serious matter is to be discussed, particularly something unpleasant that has occurred during the day, it is better not to discuss it until the husband and father has finished his evening meal. Of course, nothing serious or unpleasant should be discussed just before any meal, as the upsetment interferes with appetite and digestion.

It is not alone for this reason—interfering with appetite or digestion—that the wife and mother postpones the discussion, but because she knows that a hungry man (or woman) is more apt to be cranky or irritable than one who is not hungry.

Physiologists tell us that hunger feelings are caused by the contraction or movements of the walls of the stomach. As the stomach becomes empty the walls contract a number of times—10 to 25—after which they become quiet for a while and then start the contractions again; then a quiet period, then contractions again. The "quiet" period lasts from 10 minutes to one hour in the child and from one to three hours in an adult.

Instead of pain, the adult has feelings of weakness, tiredness and disinclination to work. He doesn't know he is hungry until he sees or smells food.

The Five Meal Plan.

Dr. Howard W. Haggard and Dr. Leon A. Greenberg, in their book, "Diet and Physical Efficiency," state: "The feeling of fatigue and irritability that shows the need for food is not relieved by rest but it is relieved by food." These research workers were able to relieve "tiredness" and get from 10 to 15 per cent more work from shoe workers by dividing the "usual" amount of food into five meals instead of three. Food was thus given before the tired, irritable feelings occurred.

"The man returning to his home in the evening, tired, irritable and dispirited from a 'hard day' at his work, finds no satisfaction or relief in rest obtained by waiting for his evening meal. Relief from irritability, fatigue and depression comes only when the meal is eaten."

Infected Teeth Menace Health

IF a distinguished physician or dentist were to say, "The one great objective of the life of a dentist should be to save teeth," most of us would agree.

Dr. Earl H. Thomas, Chicago, a physician and dentist, in the Journal of the American Dental Association disagrees with the above quoted statement. He says "If there is one great objective in the life of a dentist, it should be to place the mouth of his patient in a condition of health. All else is secondary. General health and life, when they depend upon such a condition, are more important than all the teeth in the mouth."

A great number of individuals have abscessed teeth who apparently suffer no ill effects yet others have rheumatism followed by heart diseases due to just one tooth.

Abscessed Teeth Lower Resistance.

The man with many diseased teeth has had the great advantage of being able to use these teeth for years instead of having them removed and artificial teeth inserted. Dr. Thomas points out that for every one person absorbing infection for many years with no apparent ill effects, many are in their graves prematurely because they allowed this condition to exist. Most physicians and many dentists know of cases where abscessed teeth were the cause of rheumatism, heart disease, high blood pressure, inflammation of the kidneys, peptic ulcer and other ailments. The general lowering of the body's resistance to this steady pouring out of poisons is the cause of many "breakups" of individuals in their fifties and sixties.

Present business conditions are reflected in this map of the United States prepared by the La Salle Extension University of Chicago.

Spending for Defense Speeds Up Business

L. G. ELLIOTT
President, La Salle Extension University

Fall and winter business conditions will be the best in many years, as a result of the large amounts of money being spent for national defense. The total expenditures are large and under the governmental policy of spreading orders throughout every section of the country they directly provide more money for many communities. New opportunities for labor and for profitable business are being found in cities of the interior, in smaller towns, and in rural districts.

The upward trend has already carried business close to the highest level of a year ago. It is most strikingly indicated by the much larger volume of retail sales, the registration of more new passenger cars, the greater number of freight cars loaded each week, and the increased buying of both industrial and farm products. Unless adversely affected by unfavorable events abroad, the momentum of expansion will carry on for a considerable period.

Cash farm income, this year, is estimated at close to $9,000,000,000, which is about 5 per cent higher than last year. The increase represents an average annual gain of more than $75 per farm. The number of persons employed in manufacturing, and the amounts paid in wages, exceed those of last year by about the same percentage as does farm income. When higher purchasing power enables both city and rural consumers to buy more goods, trade increases and general conditions become more favorable.

Prices for farm and industrial products have been advancing moderately during the past few weeks, and for many commodities are close to the level of a year ago. Stable prices help maintain confidence and enable industry and agriculture to plan ahead more profitably. Periods of sound prosperity are those in which prices do not change too rapidly in either direction.

The steel industry continues to be the leader among those which are advancing steadily. It reflects the volume of orders from nearly every line of business and is, therefore, a good indicator of general conditions. The developing new industry—that of armaments, requires large amounts of steel and has already pushed operations close to capacity.

Not only are government purchases for defense becoming greater, but also private buyers have been increasing their orders in response to the improved consumer demand for manufactured products.

Britain Has Bought 1,001 U. S. Ships

WASHINGTON.—Acceptance recently by the United States maritime commission of a British offer of $4,640,000 for 19 of its 20 year old laid up vessels bring to 1,001 the number of American ships bought by Great Britain since the beginning of the war. Still other ships obtained by Canada may later be transferred to England.

CHAPTER XXX—Continued

Lynn sank again into her chair. There were tears in her eyes.

"But it will be awful. Everything will be raked up again, my engagement to Wild! Oh, Mr. Mortimer, you can't do this to me!"

His eyes bored into her pleading ones. "I suppose you know now why Helen Austin ran away?" Lynn's eyes were wide as she listened.

"Charley Austin came to Palm Beach to join his brother. She thought he was in Europe. She saw him that day you were at the beach, driving his car in downtown West Palm Beach. Poor girl. She was frantic. She had to leave you stranded. She thought he knew she was there. She thought he might have seen her. She didn't even dare send for you."

"Poor Mrs. Warren . . . I mean Austin . . ." Lynn covered her face with her hands. She could see the Helen Warren she knew with her son in her arms as she read him his bedtime story. She jumped up: "I'd hurt your case. They'd say I was just trying to get even with what the Austins did to me! They'd say I'd worked myself into their confidence! Oh!"

"I've thought of all that, Miss Morrow. You're our best witness. Austin charges his wife ran away with his best friend. You know where she was those first few months after she left Austin's house. You are the only person who does."

He went on and on. Every detail of Helen Austin's struggle to keep her son with her was recounted. Mortimer's eyes were hard as they watched Lynn. "You're going to do your duty, no matter how it hurts. It's the only decent thing to do. We can't let them get away with it!"

Lynn sat with her face covered. She could see the fight stretching on and on. How well she knew the Austins would never stop until they had Buddy! She flung out her hands: "Can't you make them make it all up? Can't you use your influence to get them together?"

"How can I? He won't even talk to me! He's bitter and under the influence of his family. If he had any idea of where Mrs. Austin is, he'd get that child if it took a company of State troopers! I don't trust them. They'd agree to conciliate and they'd double-cross. I know them!" Mortimer kept her there three hours without dinner. She gave a detailed statement of her life with Mrs. Austin, five months she spent with the woman and her son in the trailer.

"It will be worth your while, Miss Morrow."

Lynn dropped her pencil as he spoke. "What I am doing, I am doing because I must tell the truth! Understand that. I don't want your money! I couldn't take it." She was furious at the implication in his voice. "All this is terrible for me! You must know that. But as you say, I can't do anything else!" Tears trembled on her long lashes, and her odd gold-flecked eyes were swimming.

It was terrible! There was no doubt that she must remain loyal to Helen Austin. She paced up and down the room, trying to see her way clear. She must see Chuck and talk to him. That was the only way. She must! No matter what Mr. Mortimer said, Chuck would listen to her. He had to!

Next morning Lynn dressed with unusual care for work. She was early, so eager and so nervous over what the day might bring that she could eat no breakfast.

During the morning she managed to find time to telephone Chuck, but she could not reach him. What she did not know was that every newspaper man in town was also trying to find Charley Austin.

At noon she went to his office. When she walked into the reception room the clerk on duty straightened. Lynn was a breath-taking sight in her lovely clothes. She smiled and asked for Mr. Austin.

"Mr. Charles Jr.," she added. "It is a personal call."

"I'm sorry, but he's out of the city."

Lynn's face clouded. She must reach him. Something in the clerk's eyes told her the truth.

"May I leave a little note for him?"

"Certainly, we'll be glad to forward it."

Lynn wrote hurriedly: "Please see me, Chuck, as soon as you can. It is terribly important to me. I'm working at Mrs. Reanoud's for two weeks." Then Lynn turned to the secretary: "This is very important to me. Will you please see that Mr. Austin gets it as soon as possible?"

She went back to the shop, waiting and hoping that he might telephone. There was no word.

Mrs. Reanoud, realizing Lynn was under a great strain, spoke casually of other things to her and did not seek to learn the cause of her agitation. For which she was grateful.

The next afternoon when Lynn had about given up in despair, Chuck telephoned to her. It was a long-distance call from Florida. "I got your note, air-mailed to me here, Lynn. What's wrong?"

"Oh, Chuck, I've got to see you!"

"Are you in trouble?"

"Yes. I need you."

Chuck paused a moment before he answered: "I'll fly in. Meet me at the airport tomorrow night."

There were tears in Lynn's voice when she thanked him.

"Don't tell anybody I'm in hiding. Just meet me there. I'm ducking everybody. I won't even go home," he said.

Lynn hung up the telephone and stood there staring at it. Now that he was coming, she was appalled at what she had done. Would he believe her? Lynn went over and over what she would say. He'd be furious. He'd tell her to mind her own business and then go and find poor Helen and steal Buddy from her.

After work the next day, she got the bus for Newark at the Hotel New Yorker. She was early.

When Chuck's ship was called, she was so nervous that her knees shook.

He was first to get off, and he seemed glad to see her.

"Well, here I am, Lynn." He was smiling, and his smile somehow reminded her so of Wild that her heart melted inside her.

"Chuck!" Now that the time had come, she was in a complete panic. She was weeping openly. Through her tears she said: "Come to my apartment. Nobody will bother us there, and we can talk."

"What has happened?" Chuck's voice was alarmed. "Is it Wild?"

"No."

She tried, but her courage failed: "Chuck, let's wait until we get to my house. It's difficult."

When they finally walked into Lynn's poor little studio, Chuck felt something of the girl's state of high tension, facing her in the light of the studio lamp.

"It's a long story, Chuck. Be patient with me." She was so appealing in her obvious panic, that Chuck was gentle with her.

"Chuck, sometimes it is hard to do the things you have to do."

"I've found that out."

"Let me tell you something about part of my life you don't know anything about." Blindly, haltingly, she continued: "It's about Florida and here. I didn't have a job. I was just out of school. One day here in New York I answered the ad of a woman in a Newark hotel." Lynn stopped: "Chuck, in spite of all that's happened do you have faith in me?" She broke down suddenly.

Chuck, watching her bowed head, was mystified, but he felt sincerely sorry for her:

"I have faith in you, Lynn. You're honest."

CHAPTER XXXI

His answer gave Lynn strength to go on.

"I went to work for a woman. She had a trailer, and she wanted me to go with her down South, as a maid, help her drive, take care of her child. That was in October."

Suddenly Chuck's face assumed a different expression. There was a sudden hardening of his eyes. Lynn seeing this, stood silent before him, beseeching him: "You must listen. I stayed with that woman until February." She tried to choose her words carefully. It was hard. She was a heartbroken woman. Chuck, I know. Night after night, I heard her cry herself to sleep. We wandered all over the South. I never knew much about her . . ."

Chuck turned suddenly in his chair: "What was her name?"

Lynn did not answer, for a moment. She came over to Chuck and slipped onto her knees beside him. "I'm throwing myself on your mercy, Chuck. You've got to play fair with me! You've got to!" He did not answer.

She put her hand on his shoulder. "You've got to promise! You've got to."

He stared at her for a long time. Finally he spoke: "It was Helen, wasn't it?" His words were not even a question.

"Yes."

"Buddy?"

"He was with us."

"God!" Chuck covered his face with his hands for a moment. Then he stood up: "Where are they now? What name was she using? I'll have every cop in the country after her."

"Yes."

"Buddy?"

"He was with us."

"God!" Chuck covered his face with his hands for a moment. Then he stood up: "Where are they now? What name was she using? I'll have every cop in the country after her."

"Yes."

"Buddy?"

"He was with us."

"God!" Chuck covered his face with his hands for a moment. Then he stood up: "Where are they now? What name was she using? I'll have every cop in the country after her."

"Yes."

I'll find her and I'll get that baby if it's the last thing I ever do!"

She forced him to sit down and listen to her. "You've got to play fair. You'll never get that boy away from Helen Austin. I can tell you that right now!"

Chuck's eyes blazed: "This is all I wanted, a tip where they are. The rest is easy. Once I get him, she hasn't a chance."

Lynn's fighting spirit was up: "That's what you think, Chuck. I shall go on the witness stand and tell everything that happened those first five months I was with your wife and baby. When I do, there isn't a court in the world that will give you that baby, Chuck!"

Chuck looked at her unbelievably. "No, Chuck. You'll never get that boy. There isn't any other man. I know."

He started to get up: "Why did you get me from Florida to tell me this fairy story?"

"I'm telling you the truth."

"Bunk. What's Mortimer paying you?"

Lynn did not even bother to answer. She just looked into Chuck's blazing eyes, her own full of contempt. Suddenly he was on the defensive.

"Why did you wait a year to tell me this? So you knew it all along when you were giving me all that sound advice up at Austin Manor!"

Lynn swallowed, thought hard before she made her answer:

"I did not know that Helen was your wife until I saw her picture and Buddy's in the papers two days ago." She spoke simply, directly. Her level eyes forced him to look at her. He laughed loud:

"Did Mortimer send you here to see me? He's tried hard enough to get me every way."

"If Mr. Mortimer knew I was here telling you this, he'd be frantic."

"Then you're working for him."

"I am his witness, if that is what you mean. I am going to be honest with you, Chuck."

He threw up his hands. "Very smart of Mortimer, but not smart enough. I'll have that baby in two days."

Lynn was white now. She'd never forgive herself if this did not turn out right. She stood before him, her hands clenched together.

"Helen's a decent woman! When I say she loves you, I mean it. You didn't use her right! I know so well what happened. She was a working woman. Leisure is hard for us. Your friends up at Austin Manor didn't care about me, either. They've got a closed union. They said from the beginning that your marriage wouldn't work. And they did everything they could to see it didn't."

"That isn't true! My family did everything . . ."

"I'm not talking about your family. Do you think that gang was nice to me when I was up there?"

Chuck seemed surprised. "Of course they were!"

Lynn laughed shortly. "Of course they were not! It's little things a man doesn't understand. But I could see how they'd eat into a girl's soul. She wasn't interested in them; thought they were pretty dumb. And they resented her; thought she was dull."

At least he was listening! There was a dead silence in the room.

"Your wife ran away in a panic and left me stranded. That was because she'd seen you in West Palm Beach that day." Lynn felt she had to make the whole thing clear to him. "I didn't know. I never could understand. Not until two days ago."

Chuck turned on Lynn. "If you testify, we'll tear you to shreds. We'll bring up everything . . . Everything!" His eyes threatened her.

Lynn stood quiet, looking up at him.

"I would expect you to do that, Chuck. I'm a working woman, we're fair game. But here's one that's going to stick to your wife!"

"Chuck! Chuck! Why do you want to pillory her when she's done nothing? Why do you want to take Buddy from her when her greatest sin has been lack of understanding of your friends? What has she done?"

Chuck did not answer. He was breathing hard. He must walk warily. If he once got the boy, they could all go home! He'd take him where none of them would ever see him again!

"I know what you're thinking. You'll steal him, and Helen will never see him again!" There was agony in Lynn's voice.

"Chuck, I begged Mortimer to try to talk to you. I know the situation. But he refused. He said you'd do just what you're planning to do."

She covered her face with her hands.

"I thought I knew you. I thought you loved them both. I thought you'd believe the truth when you heard it. He warned me! But I couldn't believe anybody would do that to any other human being!"

Tears ran down her face. She had tried so hard! She had believed she could work this miracle. Bitterness swept over her.

"Why did I try? I've ruined everything, when I wanted to help! God, I wish I'd never seen the Austins!"

Chuck flared up at this: "Why did you then?"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

CHRISTIAN MOTIVES FOR ABSTINENCE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:13-16; 2:40; 4:4; 6:21, 25, 43-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.—Romans 14:17.

Life is our most precious possession. No intelligent person will waste its fleeting moments, nor defer to a later season the living of its life to the best advantage. We live now—today.

Nor is any thoughtful one ready to let life slip by without its finest and richest return of usefulness and blessing, not only to himself, but to others. International Temperance Sunday affords us an opportunity to show our young people that those who indulge in intoxicants cannot live such a life.

We suggest that a satisfying life is I. Useful (Luke 1:13-16).

John was to be born into a life of such blessed usefulness to God and man that he was to be a "joy and gladness" to his parents, "great in the sight of the Lord," and instrumental in turning "many of the children of Israel . . . to the Lord."

Such a life is worthy of emulation on the part of every young man and woman. What is the secret of it? Undoubtedly, fine Christian parentage had much to do with it. We note that God began preparing this great character a generation before he was born. Other elements also entered in, such as rearing and training, but most important of all was the fact (v. 15) that he was not to be driven by the false stimulants of this world, but by the infilling of the Holy Spirit of God. No "wine nor strong drink," but being "filled with the Holy Ghost"—there, young people, is the secret of a happy and useful life.

II. Normal (Luke 2:40).

These words stress the fact that Jesus developed normally—physically, mentally, and spiritually. Let us emphasize the need of letting children develop and grow normally, for we live in a day of constant high pressure, when even the life of a child is not permitted to grow in its God-intended peace and according to the normal processes of nature. Give your boys and girls time, and encourage them to grow normally.

Obviously, the use of strong drink can only hinder, make abnormal, or destroy such normal growth. Let's rule it out altogether and let our people grow and wax strong in the Lord.

III. Well-Balanced (4:4; 6:21, 25).

Making a life is more important than making a living. The bread of this world is not enough; we must have the satisfying portion of fellowship with God. This we find in His Word. Nothing material, social or mental will fully satisfy the soul of man. His heart cries out for a message from God.

Intoxicants make men to laugh when they ought to weep, give them a false satisfaction which is followed by an inexpressible hunger. They are unbalanced individuals.

Why not be among those who, knowing God and His Word, are intelligent enough to laugh at the right time, weep at the right time, and who know how to choose that which truly satisfies for time and eternity.

IV. Fundamentally Right (6:43-45).

There is a false optimism which would have us think we can sow to the wind and avoid reaping the whirlwind. Men are encouraged to think they can waste their time and their substance, taking into their bodies the destructive elements of intoxicating liquors, and somehow come out all right. Young people are lured by clever advertising to think it is socially correct and smart to indulge, and that there will be no evil effects. Such an obvious falsehood should not fool any keen young man or woman.

The roots of an evil life bring forth corruption, for the heart of a man who follows after sin cannot bring forth that which is good. The kind of a person you are in your heart, the things you do when no one sees, the seeds you sow in indulgent and profligate living—these determine character and destiny for time and eternity.

Just so, fine, noble and upright thoughts and actions will bring forth gloriously fine and useful lives—a delight to God and man—well-balanced—normally developed—not only without a regret at the end of life's road, but finding there God's approval.

He Did

Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.—Daniel 6:16.

Think It Over

For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul; or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul.—Matt 16:26.

AXIS CONFERENCE

Mussolini—Well!

Von Ribbentrop—You took the word out of my mouth!

Mussolini—What explanation has Hitler to make to me?

Von Ribbentrop—Explanation for what?

Mussolini—He was to have licked England by August. I had his word for it.

Von Ribbentrop—Everything in a war can't be done according to schedule.

Mussolini—This is a fine time to tell me!

Von Ribbentrop—Germany can't help it if the British fail to give up in accordance with our expectations. Their slowness in surrendering is very disturbing to Herr Hitler.

Mussolini—If it disturbs Hitler, what do you think it does to me?

Von Ribbentrop—But there is nothing for us to worry about.

Mussolini—Did you ever try standing for any length of time with one foot in the middle of a desert, one in the middle of the sea and the other foot in the middle of Europe?

Von Ribbentrop—You are giving yourself too many feet.

Mussolini—Before I get through I may need 'em. I don't like the looks of things.

Von Ribbentrop—Why did you come into the war?

Mussolini—You know very well why I came in: You gave me a complete scenario, showing that France was finished and that England was as good as sunk.

Von Ribbentrop—Everything will come out as we promised. All we need is patience and a new plan.

Mussolini—Why can't you mop up England the way you did all those other countries? There must be traitors, fifth columnists and quitters there, too.

Von Ribbentrop—Yes, but England has 'em all in jail. Now listen, Der Fuehrer says you have got to take Gibraltar. Are you ready?

Mussolini—Who? Me!

Von Ribbentrop—We must have the co-operation of Spain. We must move fast.

Mussolini—My troops never moved faster than they did when they were in Spain.

Von Ribbentrop—This time it's got to be in the right direction.

Mussolini—There are moments when I think maybe we are biting off more than we can chew.

Von Ribbentrop—You have my assurance this will be done on a 50-50 basis.

Mussolini—What do you mean by that?

Von Ribbentrop—Germany will do the biting; you can do the chewing.

Mussolini—The more you talk the more nervous I get.

Von Ribbentrop—Brace up! Don't you know Germany and Italy are super races? Don't you know they are the two greatest Powers on earth? Don't you know they are nations with a destiny? Don't you know they will rule the world?

Mussolini—I know it, and you know it . . . but does the world know it?

Jumper and Blouse Outfit With Bolero

1222-B

FOR all school-girls, in the grades and on up through college, the jumper-with-bolero outfit is the very best and most popular of classroom fashions. Every smart girl wants it. Here it is in a design (No. 1222-B) that can be quickly and economically made at home—with dart-fitted waistline, stitching for trim, and a very youthful, sufficient tailored blouse. Add the bolero to it, and make a little suit! Several blouses and one jumper and bolero go a long way toward outfitting any girl for school, and giving her the variety she craves. Corduroy, velvet and flannel are smart for the jumper and bolero; linen, flat crepe or batiste for the blouse.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1222-B is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 10 requires 2½ yards of 54-inch material without nap for bolero and jumper; 1½ yards 39-inch material for the blouse. Send order to:

Burke Continues Drive for Re-election

State's Attorney James E. Burke, Republican candidate for re-election, today charged the election of his opponent would renew the ties which for many years shackled law enforcement in Will county and prevented the banishment of slot machines, gambling and racketeering.

"My opponent and Edwin L. Wilson, former Circuit Judge, are acting together in the current campaign.

"When they do this, they bring into to open an association that has long been evident. My opponent is a political bedfellow of Wilson, and his election will put Wilson into power again.

"And this will accomplish what was prevented when we broke up a ring of illegal voters in the judicial election last June. The forces which shackled law-enforcement agencies by an injunction which brought the courts of Will county into ill-repute throughout the country, will be able to run rampant again."

State's Attorney Burke declared that upon his re-election, he will continue the same honest, fearless administration of justice that has marked his first term.

He cited that under his administration, rural crime was banished from the county, with the cooperation of the "F" men and other farmer organizations.

upon re-election, I will continue "My pledge to the voters is that these persecutions, without regard to fear or favor, and certainly with no political indebtedness to shackle me," said Burke.

THE DAVIDSONS
LICKED
THE 4 BIG JOBS
— WITH GAS!

"Things weren't always so pleasant for us, no-siree. For between our furnace and cooking cares, and our hot water and refrigeration problems, we had 4 big jobs staring us in the face every day... all day. But that's all past,

now. The way Gas has licked those 4 big jobs is nothing short of a miracle.

Millions of smart folks are getting wise—they let gas do the 4 big jobs... automatically and inexpensively."

1 GAS FOR WATER HEATING

"No more waiting, watching or disappointments now that we've got an automatic gas water heater. Just a turn of a faucet gives us plenty of piping hot water—instantly. Always ready, day or night, for a hundred and one household uses."

2 GAS FOR HOUSE HEATING

"We've said goodbye to furnace cares... thanks to clean, carefree Gas Heat. No more shoveling or worry—no ashes to haul—no soot or dirt. We fire the furnace from the easy chair by merely adjusting a thermostat on the wall."

3 GAS FOR
REFRIGERATION

"There's never a peep from our handsome, silent Gas refrigerator. And no wonder, for it hasn't any moving parts to wear or make a noise. That means longer life and extra savings, too!"

4 GAS FOR COOKING

"We took one look at a modern C/P Gas Range and it almost won us on its looks alone. But when we discovered how it saved time, fuel and food, how it cooked foods better, faster, easier... then we knew that was the range we wanted."

Loughran Quotes Judge Bartley

In a radio talk Monday, October 21st, Francis J. Loughran again put State's Attorney Burke before the bar of public opinion. He asked Burke why he didn't heed Judge Bartley's instructions to the Grand Jury, then he quoted Judge Bartley's instructions to the Grand Jury and his orders to inquire into rackets, as follows: Quote.

1st. Whether the alleged attempt to steal the recent judicial election was protracted by a syndicate controlling the rackets, gambling joints and disorderly houses.

2nd. Whether the syndicate had been bribing and otherwise carrying on illegal acts with connivance of persons in high political places.

3rd. Whether there was any illegal action involved in the attempted settlement of the Jones Case. Mr. Loughran also quoted the Honorable Judge Bartley as further telling the jurors, that Attorney-General, John E. Cassidy had promised aid in carrying out the investigation if it became necessary.

Says Burke Failed

Now, Mr. Burke, continued Mr. Loughran, why did you fail to follow these instructions of the Honorable Judge Bartley? Are these syndicates, controlled disorderly houses and gambling dens referred to by Judge Bartley, supporting you in this election?

Do they want you to win? Are they expecting you to protect them and give the same protection for their unlawful enterprises in the future as you have in the past? Mr. Burke, by your own admission that appeared in the press and I quote in part: "You stated you issued orders on April 29th, 1938, for the syndicate to remove the slots. You took your oath of office in 1936. What made you wait so long? It looked like Judge Bartley knew what he was talking about in 1939 and again in 1940 when he charged the Grand Jury to investigate syndicate control of vice and slot machines in Will County."

Charges Burke

Mr. Loughran further charged Mr. Burke of knowing that a criminal syndicate was operating in Will County, and has been in operation for the past four years. The syndicate opposed me four years ago for state's attorney and it is against me now, Loughran said.

He then read an item that appeared in a local Joliet newspaper under date of November 5th, 1936, two days after the election, and Mr. Loughran quoted said article as follows: "That the public was given a good job of political kidding when Mr. Burke chose the slogan 'Drive out the racketeers and hoodlums' and it was devised to get votes, because every known hoodlum and racketeer in Will County was found doing their bit for Mr. Burke."

Mr. Burke, it is not apparent to you as it is to everyone else that Judge Bartley knew what he was talking out when he made his two charges to two separate Grand Juries.

Mr. Loughran went on to say that in order to tell the truth and disclose the facts, he was compelled to talk upon a subject that he disliked and knew was equally repulsive to the decent people of this county. He further stated that under date of Monday, September 23rd, in his first radio talk, he charged at that time that Mr. Burke by his neglect and inefficiency, among other acts, had permitted dens of iniquity to exist in Will County, all in direct contradiction of his solemn promise made four years ago to enforce the law against vice, and the charges made by Judge Bartley to the Grand Juries and his statements made in his first broadcast were well founded, was born out of a gangland murder committed in a disorderly house, commonly known as the White House on Patterson Road on Sunday, October 13th, 1940, one of the syndicate's places.

Now, Mr. Burke, in the face of these facts, are you still running on your record? You accepted full credit in the attendant publicity for raiding this resort the day after Labor Day and at that time you did not claim that you were only a prosecutor and not an arresting officer. Why then, Mr. Burke do you now make this statement which appeared in last Monday's Herald-News which I quote as follows: "The state's attorney is a prosecutor and not an arresting officer, nevertheless, I ordered this place closed a month ago and it has been kept closed since by the Sheriff's deputies."

Mr. Burke, you now claim that you are not an arresting officer, are you not rather inconsistent Mr. Burke? When the publicity is favorable, you boast about being an arresting officer, but when the publicity is unfavorable, you deny being an arresting officer. I wonder if the coming election could have any bearing upon your dual personalities? Mr. Loughran went on to say that in this same news item Mr. Burke attempted to shift the blame to the sheriff's office and also the board of supervision, because the lack of funds had curtailed the sheriff's night force. If this is really the cause, Mr. Burke, it is still your responsibility. Loughran said, because if you had collected all monies due the county in the Jones Case, the treasury would not be empty and there would be money for the proper functioning of all county agencies.

Mr. Loughran went on to say that he hoped it would fall to his lot to make a thorough investigation of this murder and bring these killers to justice, as a warning that Will County will never tolerate a crime syndicate as long as Francis J. Loughran is the state's attorney.

Quoting in part: Quote: Citing the elimination of rural crime and the SUPPRESSING OF VICE and GAMBLING and the REPUTATION Will County has GAINED for LAW and ORDER, Burke said that his candidacy is based on a PLEDGE to CONTINUE these POLICIES in office. "I come before the voters with my RECORD before them and this record, I am confident shows that an earnest and capable state's attorney can bring about SUCH FINE and SPLENDID CONDITIONS AS PRESENTLY EXISTS IN THIS COUNTY." (End of Quote)

Is Mr. Burke trying to fool the people of these communities with the above statement?

NOW READ THE TRUTH

Under date of July 3rd, 1939 in the Joliet Herald News the Honorable JUDGE BARTLEY of the Circuit Court of Will County made the following statement to the grand jury to investigate:

- 1st. Whether the alleged attempt to steal the recent judicial election was perpetrated by a syndicate controlling rackets, gambling joints and disorderly houses.
- 2nd. Whether the syndicate had been bribing and otherwise carrying on illegal acts with connivance of persons in high political places.
- 3rd. Whether there was any illegal action involved in the attempted settlement of the Jones Case.

Again under date of September 16th, 1940, the HONORABLE JUDGE BARTLEY charged the September grand jury to investigate that SLOT MACHINES and DISORDERLY HOUSES are being operated in Will County under the influence of RACKETEERS and HOODLUMS.

The proof that Judge Bartley knew what he was talking about when he made these charges was confirmed on the night of Sunday, October 13th, 1940 by a GANGLAND MURDER in a DISORDERLY HOUSE, commonly known as the White House on the Patterson Road.

AFTER READING THE TRUTH, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF BURKE'S STATEMENT? That he suppressed vice and gambling and that he would continue his policies in office to further the splendid condition as presently exists in Will County.

Further proof of what he believes are splendid conditions will be found on page four of the Joliet Herald News under date of Monday, October 14th, 1940.

Do you want four more years of his broken pledges?

ARE YOU GOING TO LET HIM FOOL YOU AGAIN ?

Tune in WCLS every Monday and Thursday night at 6:45 P. M. "Hear Mr. Loughran discuss the issues of this campaign!"

Shall the CITY BOSSES Control America

The presidential campaign presents the odd spectacle of a UNITED FRONT of city bosses behind the third term candidacy of FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

BOSS FLYNN of the Bronx is actually chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

BOSS HAGUE of New Jersey is actually vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

BOSS KELLY of Chicago has said, "I suppose I was one of the first to go on record for a third term". He was, and it was his "Commissioner of Sewers" who—from a private microphone at the Democratic convention—kept calling "Chicago wants Roosevelt."

BOSS GUFFEY of Pennsylvania and BOSS CRUMP of Tennessee, and the PENDERGAST machine in Missouri—they are ALL for a 3rd Term. So is EARL BROWDER, head of the Communist Party, who said: "The tradition against a third term in the presidency must be laid aside."

WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, JACKSON, MADISON, MONROE, LINCOLN, WILSON COOLIDGE, — ALL WERE AGAINST A THIRD TERM FOR ANY MAN.

HALLOWEEN PARTY SUGGESTIONS
(See Recipes Below)

Household News

By Eleanor Howe

Halloween provides a good excuse for an unusual party. The theme you may select should be the basis around which the party is built. "Black Magic Party," "The Haunted House," "Buried Treasure Hunt," "The Witches' Rendezvous," "The Ghosts Gambol" are all suggestive names for the party you may be planning for All Hallows' eve.

A Halloween party without decorations just isn't a party. They may be so simple that it takes very little time to put them up; pumpkins, cornstalks, and lighted jack-o'-lanterns. Or you may decorate with witches, owls, black and orange crepe paper streamers, black and gray crepe paper moss dripping from the ceilings, or ghosts standing in spooky corners with eerie lights thrown upon them.

The invitations should, of course, be indicative of the type of party you are giving. "On Halloween the ghosts will dance,

The gnomes and goblins will sing and prance;
So don your masks and costumes gay,
To the Haunted House be on your way.

The door will be open till the clock tolls eight,
So take my advice and don't be late."

In keeping with Halloween we must not forget the traditional games and pranks. The chamber of horrors, with clanking chains, damp hands clutching the guests, and dark tunnels should put the guests into the spirit of the party. Bobbing for apples, fortune telling and guessing games are all old favorites. These suggestions may bring to your mind others that may be old-time Halloween games.

Last, but not least, a party is never rightly ended without proper refreshments. If it is a small group, buffet supper may be served; and if it is a large group, simple, but delicious refreshments will finish the evening with the necessary zip!

Halloween Ice Cream Clowns.

Place a ball of ice cream on a butter cookie and use raisins, tiny gumdrops or candied cherries to make the eyes, nose, and mouth in the ice cream.

Place an ice cream cone upside down on the ice cream for a cap, and place a ruff of whipped cream on the cookie around the clown's neck.

A WOMAN'S INSTINCT

By BARBARA BENEDICT
Associated Newspapers.
WNU Service.

SHIRLEY OAKES was stubborn. You could tell that by looking at the set of her chin and the tilt of her nose and the look in her eyes. She was stubborn, and, therefore, Dave Norden was a little surprised when she yielded in his embrace and lifted her lips to be kissed. He had been a little bewildered by her stubbornness, but this—the pressure and warmth of her mouth against his—he understood perfectly.

He released her and said: "Jinks! I didn't think you really loved me. I thought you were only kidding. Say, listen, there's a preacher over to Meadows Corner. We'll drive over there right now and get a license and get married!"

Shirley gasped. "Why the very idea!"

"It's a grand idea," Dave said. "Why, listen, I've been waitin' to ask you to marry me ever since you came out here. Only," he grasped her arm and began leading her toward the buggy, "I didn't dast."

Shirley jerked herself loose. Her eyes flashed angrily. "Dave Norden, I believe you're serious. The very idea! Just because I told you you were the nicest boy I'd met in a long time, I declare!"

"You let me kiss you," Dave challenged.

"Why, I've let dozens of boys kiss me." She knew she shouldn't have said it. Dave couldn't understand that. Kissing meant more to him; it meant something sacred. It was as good as a promise.

"You haven't. You're just saying that. You want to marry me only you're scared. Now that you've gone this far you're trying to back out. That's foolish, because after it's all over you'll be glad."

She started to run from him, but he overtook her easily.

"You let me alone. Dave Norden, you must be crazy!"

"Crazy about you. You're coming to Meadows Corner and you're goin' to marry me."

He lifted her into the seat with no more effort than if she had been a doll, and climbed in beside her; held her with one hand while he picked up the reins with the other. She fought and bit, but he paid no heed, and this enraged her. It enraged her because he was so strong and handsome and clean and wholesome, and in so many other ways like the kind of boy she had sometimes pictured.

Presently she sat still, staring angrily out between the bobbing ears of the horse. He grinned and looked at her.

"That's right. Take it easy. Tucker yourself all out squirmin' around."

"You won't get away with this," she said bittily. "You won't make me marry you. Soon as we get where there's people, I'll scream."

"We won't see any people between here and the Corner."

"There'll be people in town. A body can't get married without people around."

He nodded. "That's so." Then: "Most of the people know how we've been carryin' on. They'll understand."

"You mean—you'd tell them—Dave Norden!"

"Won't tell them anything, let 'em figure it out for themselves."

"Dave Norden, you must be a fool! You can't scare me. A girl doesn't have to get married unless she wants to."

"Nope," said Dave, "not unless she wants to."

"And you think I want to! Why, I wouldn't marry you if—if—for anything!"

Dave didn't answer. He wasn't grinning any more and there was a furrow between his eyes.

A mile this side of Meadows Corner a nut came off the rear left wheel and he pulled up. He climbed out and looked at the wheel and said he'd have to go back and find the nut.

Without waiting for Shirley's reply, if any, he started to backtrack. He walked slowly with his head bent. Fifty yards down the road he found the nut and returned with it. Shirley was sitting as he'd left her, staring straight ahead, her eyes still angry.

Presently they were plodding along once more. They passed several outlying houses and after awhile turned into the main street. There were a dozen or more pedestrians in sight. Dave glanced sideways at his companion, as if half expecting her to scream and attract attention.

But Shirley didn't, and when they drew up in front of Gus Stevens' house she sat still. Gus was the town clerk and could issue marriage licenses.

Dave twisted the reins in his hands and kept his eyes downcast. There was a moment of silence, and then he said: "Listen, Shirley, I reckon if I wanted I could go in there and get us a license and then drive down to Squire Robbins and get married. I guess I could do that all right, but somehow I've sorta lost the urge."

"Well, I should think so," said Shirley. "The very idea!"

There was another moment of silence. Something seemed to be troubling Dave. He looked up again.

"There's just one thing," he said, "I'd like to know about. It kinda bothers me. Back there in the road when I got out to find the nut, why didn't you run then when you had the chance?"

"Run? Why should I run? Besides, you're so smart and sure of yourself, why don't you figure it out?"

"I've been trying to," said Dave. "But it's got me licked. That's why I drove on in town here—sort of hoping and expecting you'd explain it. But since you won't—" he picked up the reins again—"I reckon we better drive back. I reckon I couldn't go through with this even if I wanted. I don't understand women."

"I should say you don't. Far from it. Or you wouldn't have to ask why I didn't get out and run." She paused, but Dave's frown only deepened. "Why, anyone with any brains at all could have seen as plain as anything that it was because I was afraid you wouldn't try to catch me that second time."

"Whoa," said Dave. Carefully he wound the reins around the whipstock, and leaped to the ground. "Get down," he said to Shirley, and Shirley got down.

"Now, Dave Norden," she began, "if you think for one minute—"

But Dave was grinning again, leading her up the walk toward Gus Stevens' front door. Why, shucks, he thought, no harm in a woman being a little stubborn if she wanted to.

JANET MAKES A DECISION

By JOYCE TEMPLE
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

AT LAST Janet Conrad came to a decision. With a sigh of relief she jumped up and started dressing.

She did not whistle as she usually did—instead there was a little frown between her finely penciled brows and her ordinarily sunny face was clouded with thought.

"No, sir," she told herself, "no love in a cot for me. Jack Benton's a darling, but nothing can take the place of my freedom and my forty berries per. As soon as he rings I'll go down and tell him 'no,' then he'll go away."

She thought back over the telegram she had received that morning. "Reach town via auto late this afternoon. May I see you seven o'clock? Something important to tell you, Jack."

She knew what the something important meant and at last she had reached her decision. She was glad too for Jack's frequent visits had caused her anxiety. She had always looked forward to them and at the same time she had dreaded them. He was so irresistibly boyish in his manner and so flatteringly infatuated that she had always felt the danger.

If he had proposed to her without having given her the chance to reflect and think it over she would have probably fallen for him on the spot, but this way—thank goodness he had warned her. Now she had herself well in hand and it would be easy to resist his pleading.

She wondered how he would take it. Of course, he would probably feel pretty distressed at first, but that was natural. Nobody liked getting turned down. She would be as gentle and considerate as possible.

Her thoughts ran along as she got into the little pink dress.

When Jack saw her a few minutes later he gasped involuntarily, but much to her chagrin he did not propose. And you simply can't say "no" to a man who has not said "will you?" He merely remarked after greetings were over:

"Say, I know a road by the river. I've always wanted to explore it. Shall we take a little spin in the car?"

Janet was slightly irritated. However, there was nothing she could do but consent to the ride, so they got into the little waiting car and were soon hurrying along the highway. The river road was several miles out of town and by the time they reached it dusk had crept off into the woods and had given the world over to the moon. Janet had no idea how long they had been driving when Jack stopped the car.

"Now it's coming," she thought with a little shiver. "He's going to propose right here and now. What shall I say? Goodness, I wish it were over."

But he did nothing of the sort. He said nothing, not a word. He simply took her in his arms and she felt his gentle kisses. She was hypnotized. There was something electrical, magnetic about his touch and her mind whirled around in a chaos of thought. "If only he hadn't brought me here. Thank goodness, he brought me here."

After awhile he spoke. "It'll be tough sledding at first, honey, but we'll get along."

"Who cares about tough sledding as long as we're together!"

She heard herself saying the words, but still she could not believe her own ears. Then this new Janet said something else with a little lilting laugh: "Jack, I was beginning to be so afraid you wouldn't propose. You took so long to get to it."

As a matter of fact he never did actually get to it, but neither one realized it and just at that second the old dead Janet raised up her head for a last laugh as she chanted derisively: "Little trick nature plays on all of us."

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE newest frilled curtains give a full, lavish effect. If they make your old curtains look a bit dejected, like those shown here at the right, don't be discouraged. The window at the left uses those same curtains with a dash of glamour added. This economy trick saved a certain young matron enough money to buy a number of smart new accessories for her living room.

She discovered that a diagonal dart, which took up the curtains at the back, threw more fullness to the front, thus giving the new high drape a smart line. Tie-backs and valance were made of flowered chintz in rose and plum tones, lined with plain plum colored chintz. One yard of each kind of chintz was required for each window.

NOTE: The chintz covered lamp shade and the spool table also add interest to this window. Full directions for making a shade like the one illustrated are in SEWING, Book 1. Directions for the spool table are in Book 5; also descriptions of
